A NOTE ON WORKING WITH VERY LARGE GROUPS

This workshop asks students to reflect personally on the materials and topics shared, and to work most intensely with peers that are seated nearby. All size groups work well as long as participants can see the slides, videos, and presenter notes, and hear the media and those who speak. For very large groups, instead of having share-outs to the whole assembly, ask student pairs / trios to combine with other small groups nearby so that reporting is done between 12–16 peers, while you monitor the assembly and listen to the interactions.

IMPORTANT NOTES BEFORE BEGINNING

Make sure your internet is up and running.

Make sure the audio system/speakers are on and at a volume appropriate for the room.

Test your connection and sound ahead of time by opening the slide show, advancing to Slide 5, and clicking on the video URL. Once you have tested the system, you can close the browser window.

It's a really good idea to make your own Global Idea Catcher before you give this workshop. Write your own ideas on the Catcher as described in this lesson plan. To learn how to fold and use this dynamic learning manipulative, see the graphic steps on page 7 of the student handout, or watch a YouTube video (e.g. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=DHT3N-pXVTY>). Though it is often called a cootie-catcher, you can use this tool for lots of curricular areas—and students can use it in the workshop for capturing their thoughts and experiences.

Distribute student handouts; make sure each student has a writing instrument.

Project PowerPoint slide 1 as a visual welcome while you finish your preparations.

When you're done, carefully bend and separate off the bottom directions to leave the square. Then, following the idea catcher folding directions, fold your idea catcher into its final shape.

(Here's a video demonstrating how to fold an idea catcher to accompany the instruction sheet: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ccrwwGYlqyg>)

The finished idea catcher should allow students to follow a journey from a specific action, to a global issue, to a word or phrase associated with global citizenship.
